ON THE WAY....

Father
Thomas
Augustine
Judge, C.M.,
Part II

These notes are based on an article written by Fr. David O'Connor, S.T. and published in the Vincentian Heritage Journal in 1985.

In the summer of 1915, Fr. Judge was made Superior of St. Mary's Mission House in Opelika, Alabama. Alabama was the edge of the universe in 1915 and the members of the newly formed lay movement, the Missionary Cenacle, were appalled that Fr. Judge was stationed so far away from them. The area of Alabama given to the priests of the Congregation of the Mission (Vincentians) comprised 5,300 square miles with 210,000 people, 120 of whom were Catholics. He was encouraged by the former Superior to start a school, but was unable to obtain any Sisters. Anti-Catholic bigotry met the work of the Vincentian priests everywhere they turned. As a last resort he appealed to some of the generous Missionary Cenacle members to come South. In 1916, a small group women came to Alabama. They opened a school in Phenix City, Alabama. Despite the Ku Klux Klan and threats of violence, the school met with some success. Some of the lay people had decided to remain and give their lives to the apostolate and more came to offer help. The "Catholic ladies," as they were called, were living a community life and accomplishing much good. During an epidemic of influenza in 1918, they nursed the sick and the dying and won the favor of the townspeople. Fr. Judge encouraged and directed them in their apostolic work. A group of men who had come from the northern Missionary Cenacle were living and working on a nearby plantation owned by a Catholic. The Bishop of Mobile, the Most Rev. Edward P. Allen, gave the group permission to incorporate civilly so that other property could be bought. This property became known as Holy Trinity, Alabama, and a school was erected, later called St. Joseph's School. The concept of forming a religious missionary congregation was now firmly established in the minds of many of the lay people living under Fr. Judge's direction. The lay apostolate was Fr. Judge's primary interest throughout his priestly life. He desired to inspire every Catholic to be a missionary. However, when the lay associates in the Missionary Cenacle developed their own distinctive customs, practices, and spirit, and some began to live a community life with the intention of becoming religious, Fr. Judge saw this as the working of the Holy Spirit. Without ever disrupting the original purpose of this lay apostolic group, there developed out of this activity two nascent religious missionary congregations, one for women and the other for men. These in turn had the intention of continuing to foster the lay apostolate as well as directly undertaking missionary activities in the abandoned areas of the United States and preserving the faith. However, it was never the initial intention of Fr. Judge to found the religious congregations. When things developed in that direction, he complied with what he believed to be the will of God. Both the women's and men's group were initially called the Missionary Servants of the Most Blessed Trinity.

Peace,
Fr. John Edmunds, S.T

The Parish Council has decided that St. James needed to make a change in our program of sharing. The Council felt that there needed to be a deeper connection with our "sharing." Deacon Coleman, who is assigned to St. James, is the director of Zacchaeus House. Zacchaeus House is a residential program for the homeless sponsored by the African American deacons in the Archdiocese. St. James has become involved in the apostolate and we anticipate that relationship growing. Therefore the Council decided that Zacchaeus House will become the recipient of our "sharing."

St. James is grateful for the opportunity to have had St. Agatha's as our sharing parish for the past years. As of July 1 we will cease in our second collection for St. Agatha and begin our collection for Zacchaeus House. We will keep St. Agatha in our prayers and hearts.

There is one opening on the Social Care Board. The Social Care Board oversees food assistance to low income families through the food pantry. Which includes: emergency care services, lunch program, second Saturday of the month food distribution, and offsite food distribution. It also oversees pantry holiday programs and the social needs of the elderly. If anyone is interested in joining the Social Care Board please contact Liz Bowman, chair or Peter Wawire, director.
