THE MOST HOLY TRINITY

JUNE 15, 2025

Father's Day

ON THE WAY....

May the grace and peace of the Holy Spirit be with us forever.

One of my theological heroes is Catherine LaCugna who taught at Notre Dame before dying tragically at only 44 years old in 1997. Her best known work was entitled God for Us and it helped me to understand what my religious vocation dedicated to the Trinity meant. She says faithful Trinitarian faith must be practical and include an understanding of our own personhood in relationship with God and each other, which she calls "living God's life with one another." "God is essentially relational," she wrote, and humans are called by God's grace to enter into that mode of loving relationship.

For LaCugna, the doctrine of the trinity is a way of contemplating the mystery of God and of ourselves, a framework for correct thought about God and ourselves in relation to God. All correct thought about God begins here, with what God has actually done in the economy of salvation in Christ and through the Spirit. Here we may know the God who comes to us. At the heart of all reality is the personal God whose being is communion, the God who exists toward and for another. The reign of God, the household of God exists where this form of life—exemplified by Jesus—is evident in how we live. Jesus is both the exemplar and the criterion of the reign of God, both in his life and in his teaching. According to LaCugna, Christian life must correspond to what we believe to be true about God, and what is true about God is known by what God has done in human history.

This, perhaps, takes us to the very heart of LaCugna's project: to stir and renew the Christian imagination in ways shaped by the triune God as revealed in the Bible. That is, to imagine a church and a society grounded in values of communion, inclusion, relationship, personhood, equality, mutuality and generous self-giving service. "This is the lofty vocation of the members of the church of Jesus Christ, to be stewards of God's economy, to serve others, to preach the message of the reign of God, to promote communion. Below find a long quote from the book which continues to inspire me.

Living trinitarian faith means living God's life: living from and for God, from and for others. Living trinitarian faith means living as Jesus Christ lived, in persona Christi: preaching the gospel; relying totally on God; offering healing and reconciliation; rejecting laws, customs, conventions that place persons beneath rules; resisting temptation; praying constantly; eating with modern-day lepers and other outcasts; embracing the enemy and the sinner; dying for the sake of the gospel if it is God's will. Living trinitarian faith means living according to the power and presence of the Holy Spirit: training the eyes of the heart on God's face and name proclaimed before us in the economy; responding to God in faith, hope and love; eventually becoming unrestrictedly united with God. Living trinitarian faith means living together in harmony and communion with every other creature in the common household of God, "doing all things to the praise and glory of God."
